

Democratic decline and democratic renewal : political change in Britain, Australia and New Zealand / Ian Marsh, Raymond Miller.

Cambridge : Cambridge University Press, 2012.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Part I. Introduction:

1. The decline and renewal of democratic governance: a theoretical framework;

Part II. Political Change in Britain: The Development of a Strategy Gap:

2. The mass party system and state strategic capacity in Britain;
3. Neo-liberalism and the decline of state strategic capacity;
4. Why the gap in strategic capacity poses a systemic challenge;

Part III. Political Change in Australia: The Development of a Representation Gap:

5. Everyman is king: representation and strategic capacity in Australia's mass party period;
6. Pluralised society, individualised politics: the gap between citizens and the formal political system;
7. Why a representation gap poses a systemic challenge (and the populist alternative);

Part IV. Political Change in New Zealand: Voting Reform, Multi-Party Politics and Minority Government:

8. Identities and capabilities in the mass party era in New Zealand;
9. Neo-liberalism, social change and democracy;
10. Is electoral reform sufficient?;

Part V. Democratic Renewal:

11. Reconnecting citizens to the political system;
12. The prospect for democratic renewal.